DON'T MIND IF I DO

January 30 - June 28, 2026
Smith College Museum of Art

Welcome to my access fantasy !!

I'm disabled and I need to sit and I love to sit. I've been dreaming about an exhibition where instead of having to move from artwork to artwork, I could sit somewhere comfortable and have the artwork come to me. So voilà! Here, we have a conveyor belt of artworks surrounded by a variety of seating options.

When planning this project, a big question was: what artwork should the conveyor carry? The artists, writers, and thinkers featured here nourish my life and practice, and I can't resist a chance to share their work. Each of the objects presented asks for varied ways of interacting and opens up possibilities for how and what an artwork can convey.

I invite you to find a spot to your liking. From there, you have options for how you might experience the work.

Choose one or a combo:

Watch as a parade of objects moves by you.

Pick something up and spend some time with it.

Touching things is very much encouraged
(though of course, touch with tenderness).

Listen to audio descriptions available in the gallery or via scma.smith.edu/audio (the transcript is there too).

Don't mind if I do,

Thank you !!

Every project is an ecosystem and every person and role is essential. Deeply appreciative of all the people who are part of this ecosystem.

Thank you to Peter Reese who did the technical direction for this project. Peter truly took my description of an access fantasy and turned it into the 3-dimensional, moving, functional conveyor belt we have here. Thank you, Peter!! Big thank you curator Lauren Leving for getting excited about this idea when it was just a spark and championing it the whole way. What a treat that we still get to work together three years in. And thank you to the team at Smith College Museum of Art for stewarding and adapting this project to a new space and place — getting to bring the conveyor belt here is a dream!

I would also like to thank Ainsley Buckner and Sears think[box] for fabrication support; Derya Hanife Altan for cushion sewing; Chad Fust for 3D scanning support; Nathan Florsheim for furniture support; Amelia Brod for advice; the disabled@MIT student group for introducing me to Corsi-Rosenthal boxes; and to my loved ones for being the lights of my life.

Thank you to Nook Gallery (2015 – 2020 – ∞) for supporting the first iteration of this project and allowing these ideas and ways of working to grow.

Last but not least, thank you to Lukaza, Pelenakeke, Sky, Emilie, Felicia, Joselia, and Jeff for entrusting your work to this experiment. I love each of your pieces so much and it is such an honor to have them here.
